General Grant's Condition Still Very Favorable.

TERRIFIC CLOUD BURST IN TEXAS

Peace Considered Assured between England and Russia—Basis of the Proposed Compromise—Heavy Fighting in Tonquin

NEW YORK, April 19.—[illegible] passed quietly at the General's [illegible] last night. Cyrus W. Field drove up to the house at 1:45 this morning and had a short conversation with the general [illegible] better than it has [illegible]. He said the [illegible] would not [illegible].

At [illegible] the general appeared at the front window and seemed to enjoy the bright sunshine. People passing on the other side of the street noticed his presence [illegible]. About the same time Jesse Grant went out for a stroll with his little daughter Nelsie. She saw the upturned faces on the other side of the street, looked up to the window where the general stood and quickly placing both chubby hands to her lips threw a kiss to him. "There's grandpa," cried the child as she [illegible] and in response Grant nodded to the child [illegible].

At [illegible] o'clock the entire staff of physicians met in consultation, after which this bulletin was issued: [illegible] At a consultation held this [illegible] Drs. Barker, Sands, Shrady and Douglas were present. General Grant was found to be in improved condition both general and local as compared with the last statement. Physicians in attendance [illegible].

J. H. DOUGLAS, M. D.
GEORGE F. SHRADY, M. D.

[illegible] a change for the worst, [illegible] there will be another general consultation [illegible]. Dr. Shrady will not call again until Wednesday. Dr. Douglas will be in charge and will remain nights at General Grant's desire. Other doctors are [illegible] in readiness to respond to a call from Dr. Douglas should a change take place. The general this afternoon for the first time in [illegible] days slept an hour upon his bed. General George B. McClellan, Sidney Dillon and [illegible] called this afternoon.

GOLD AND SILVER PRODUCTION.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Burchard, director of the mint, in his special annual report on the production of gold and silver in the United States for the calendar year 1884, which has been ordered printed, estimates the production of the country to have been: Gold, $30,000,000; silver, computed at silver dollars coining rate, $48,800,000; total $78,800,000. This shows an increase over the yield of the previous year of about $800,000 gold and $2,400,000 silver. The total deposits of gold at the mints during the year amounted to $[illegible], of which $30,807,[illegible] was reported as domestic. Exports of gold bullion exclusive of United States bars amounted to only $[illegible]. To the amount deposited at the mints and the small amount exported might properly be added $300,000 worth of gold contained in silver bullion exported and also possibly $[illegible] undeposited gold in the form of nuggets [illegible] used in ornamentation and $[illegible] in bars in private refineries used for similar purposes, which would make in all an addition of about $[illegible]. But of gold received from British Columbia and the northern states of Mexico, amounting to about $1,100,000, only $400,000 was deposited at the San Francisco mint as foreign, and statements [illegible] by refiners show that it was [illegible] refined bullion [illegible] under the head of domestic.

MONSIGNOR [illegible] CONSECRATED [illegible] VICAR OF IDAHO.

BALTIMORE, April 19.—Monsignor A. J. Glorieux was today consecrated in the cathedral in this city as bishop [illegible] vicar of Idaho. [illegible] The ceremony was conducted with all the ceremony and pomp possible. Archbishop Gibbons [illegible] the consecrator. [illegible] Magnien [illegible] McManus [illegible] were masters of ceremonies. [illegible] W. Devine [illegible] mass. The assistant [illegible] Savannah [illegible] Virginia [illegible].

THE ANGLO-RUSSIAN DISPUTE.

BASIS OF THE REPORTED COMPROMISE.

LONDON, April 20.—The Standard [illegible] the following is the basis of the reported compromise between England and Russia: Russia consents to an immediate [illegible] between Zulfikar and [illegible], England having agreed to limit the zone to be [illegible] to territory between the Lassar line on the south and a line from Ak Tepe to Puli Khatun on the north, excluding [illegible] and including Penjdeh. Russia renews her assurance that no further advance will be [illegible] provided the Afghans do not attempt to regain their position. The commissioners are instructed to establish the frontier north of Meruchak and to the south of Puli Khatun, restoring Zulficar and Akrobat to Afghanistan. Penjdeh is to be ceded to Russia, and a friendly agreement is to be made with the ameer.

WAR PREPARATIONS CONTINUE.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 19.—The arming of [illegible] at Cronstadt continues. Orders were issued today to have all put to sea. Advices from [illegible] state that General Komaroff's victory over the Afghans has favorably impressed the inhabitants of Bokhara.

ST. PETERSBURG, April [illegible].—It is asserted [illegible] that England has made fresh proposals which Russia declined to accept. [illegible]

THE RIEL REBELLION.

WINNIPEG, April 19.—A dispatch from Clark's crossing tells of the capture near there of three Indians, one of whom proved to be a cousin of White Cap, chief of the Sioux Indians, now with Riel. They explained that White Cap's band was induced to visit Riel by promises of plenty of provisions [illegible] and that the band had been forced to stay. They said Riel was at his house at Batoche and had 300 half breeds with him and seven prisoners. Middleton sent one of the Indians to report to White Cap [illegible]. [illegible]

A dispatch from Swift Current dated April 18 says: An immediate advance of the Midland battalion to the south Saskatchewan crossing will be made Sunday. Steamers loaded with stores and a Gatling gun for Middleton will be escorted on the dangerous trip down the Saskatchewan to Clark's crossing by the right wing of the battalion under Colonel Williams.

It's no Exaggeration.

New York Tribune, April [illegible].

It is [illegible] that [illegible] Oregon papers state that [illegible] in Portland for the past two months. Flowers have been blooming out of doors all the winter. [illegible] and we are left to infer that the fruits of trees [illegible] approaching ripeness, but that [illegible] be an exaggeration. Moreover on the [illegible] of the winter the thermometer [illegible] sixteen degrees above zero, while the [illegible] temperature was about what that of spring ought to be. It is fortunate that the Oregon papers [illegible] in this part of the country. If [illegible] the Paradise of the Pacific Coast.

She Had no Revelation.

Springfield Republican.

Miss Frances Willard has shocked the religious people and one would suppose all her friends as well by informing the Alton presbytery in Illinois that she has received a "divine revelation" calling her to work for the political advancement of woman and that she now holds it the duty of the Women's Christian temperance union to make woman suffrage a principal object of their labors. [illegible] Miss Willard [illegible] as strong a case as a keen, earnest, persistent woman could desire, and it is a pity she [illegible] herself with that vagary. The Christian people who have backed her and the organization of which she has been the vigorous [illegible] will never allow that she can have had a revelation, because it is regarded as a settled fact in all the churches that God stopped revealing anything over 1800 years ago. Miss Willard has [illegible] resented.

PACIFIC COAST.

CALIFORNIA

[illegible] IN SKATING RINKS.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 19.—[illegible] New York special: The newest phase of diversion in the skating rinks is the [illegible] character of [illegible]. Girls [illegible] join in the sport [illegible] practiced in most of these resorts [illegible] any female skater with an offer of his [illegible] as a partner and out of [illegible] in that informal manner [illegible] to arise the principal abuses charged against the rinks in this city. But the outcome of the custom is comical too in the fact that numerous mischievous and sufficiently effeminate fellows masquerade in girls' clothes to the complete deception of both spectators and partners. These counterfeits have passed as genuine [illegible] giddy creatures and managers of other than badly reputed rinks have permitted themselves to the extent of providing separate rooms and facilities for artistic disguising. They claim the joke is innocent and funny, but the police take a different view. The proprietors of the Cosmopolitan, one of the most popular rinks in upper Broadway, has been arrested under the law forbidding disguising intended to deceive, and the determination is to stop the practice entirely.

TODAY'S WEATHER.

For the [illegible] Pacific slightly warmer, fair weather and variable winds. For the middle [illegible] slightly warmer, generally fair weather and northwesterly winds. For the south Pacific fair weather, westerly winds and [illegible] stationary temperature.

SCULLING MATCH POSTPONED.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 19.—The sculling match between [illegible] of Pittsburg and Stevenson of Vallejo, Cal., which was to have taken place today, was owing to boisterous weather postponed to [illegible].

STATE DISPATCHES.

NOTES FROM JACKSONVILLE.

JACKSONVILLE, April 18.—Martin and William Mackey of Josephine county, who are under a charge of murder in the first degree and have been granted a new trial, will be tried in Jackson county through a change of venue. There are a large number of witnesses and it will make quite an expense for Josephine county.

Fruit has been damaged greatly by frost.

THE EAST SIDE.

LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEERS ORGANIZE.

A division of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers was organized at Odd Fellows' hall, East Portland yesterday by James Randall, chief engineer of Columbia division No. 236 of The Dalles, assisted by a delegation from that division. The new division was christened Willamette Division No. [illegible] and a charter membership of ten was enrolled. After temporary organization permanent organization was effected by the election and installation of the following officers:

Chief engineer—J. W. Miller.
First engineer—J. Kehoe.
Second engineer—J. McF[illegible].
First assistant engineer—W. J. Sally.
Second assistant engineer—T. Hannigan.
Third assistant engineer—J. D. Palmer.
Guide—J. J. O'Malley.
Chaplain—D. McCarthy.
Corresponding secretary—C. A. McDonald.

[illegible] a recess for refreshments was taken [illegible] at the Campi restaurant. The tables were spread lavishly and attacked unsparingly, the genial good humor characteristic of railroad men conspiring with the palatable viands in adding [illegible]. Toasts were severally drunk to "Division No. 236," "Division No. [illegible]," "The O. R. & N. Co.," "The O. & C.," and "The Press," and when the toasts and viands were disposed of the [illegible] symbol of peace brought the festivities to a fitting termination. The new division will [illegible] regularly twice a month hereafter. This being the terminus of several roads, a nucleus only has been formed for what will doubtless become a large and flourishing division. The object of the brotherhood is to make its members better men and better engineers, its motto being "Sobriety, truth, justice, morality." It has a numerous and growing membership extending throughout the United States, the Canadas and Mexico. Its headquarters are at Cleveland, Ohio.

NOTES.

Thomas [illegible], who fell through the [illegible] street bridge two weeks ago, was able to take a carriage ride Saturday.

D. McCarthy, engineer of the swing passenger between Grant's Pass and Ashland, is visiting relatives in East Portland. He will return Tuesday.

A [illegible] ticket has been put up for the third ward election today in opposition to the republican ticket. Its candidates for councilmen are: Short term, Joseph Paquet; long term, N. K. West.

J. L. Sperry and Nat Lane brought home twenty-eight geese from the island Friday, and on Saturday Tom Parrott and Henry Prettyman followed suit with an even two dozen from the slough. They are flying low and plenty.

Rev. John W. Sellwood, rector of St David's church, will leave the present week for southern Oregon for the double purpose of improving his health and assisting in the missionary work in that section. His tour will extend over three Sundays, but his position at the church will be filled by others during his absence, so that services will continue as usual.

Tom Jones or Burns, a fast young man, created a scene driving through town early last evening with a woman of the same ilk and refused to desist when ordered by officer McMillan to do so, defying the officer to arrest him. The officer did not await a second defiance. He will probably not feel like defying the recorder after a night in the cooler. He is the same individual who was arrested a short time since for knocking down a Chinaman, and forfeited his bail.

ALKALI NOTES.

ALKALI, Or., April 1[illegible].

Sheep shearing is in full blast at [illegible]'s and Willis' five miles south of Alkali. Three to four thousand sheep are daily relieved of their woolly coats.

Miles upon miles of rich bunch-grass land, now the smiling home of the farmer snug in his cottage, securely enclosed with a bright barb wire fence, can now be seen all along the road in a day's drive back of Alkali.

Gilliam county, the new county created from the [illegible] part of Wasco and western part of Umatilla, is now in full bloom with Alkali as the county seat. James W. Smith, judge; J. Blakely, sheriff; [illegible], clerk; H. C. [illegible], treasurer.

Will [illegible], the sheep king of Morrow, who has 6000 head of sheep, 10,000 acres fenced land, [illegible] will build a $6000 court house and present it to the new county provided the county seat is located at his place.

The country 100 miles south of this point in Grant, Wasco, Umatilla and Gilliam counties for the past few years has produced large bands of sheep, cattle and horses, which are now offered for sale at very low figures. Good sound sheep can be had after shearing at from $1.25 to $1.60 per head, cattle at $20 per head and horses from $40 to $60 per head, taking the band round. It will pay eastern buyers to visit this country.

THE MUGWUMPS.

Their Transcendental Doctrinairism and Hard Cheek.

New York Sun.

The mugwumps are a constant fount of marvel and entertainment to the student of the grotesque in politics. Their combination of ingenious traits, transcendental doctrinairism with hard cheek, stimulates the observer and invites the analyst. And in the whole domain of mugwumpery there is nothing more peculiar than the hatred of the mugwump for the working politicians. On the heads of these poor fellows are poured out all the vials of the mugwumps' wrath. It doesn't hurt the politicians, and we suppose that it relieves the mugwumps. These good people are engaged in the somewhat difficult task of showing that the first duty of an administration is to kick the men who worked hardest to put it in power. But probably it will be hard for the mugwumps to persuade the present administration of the utter wickedness of democrats who have been active in political work. Certainly it will go hard with the administration if it allows itself to be persuaded. Much as we like and enjoy the mugwumps, we must say they are ungrateful to despise the workers. If it hadn't been for those busy and cool headed fellows in the democratic party, brother Blaine would now be in the White house and the mugwumps as miserable as they are happy. Mighty useful were these same "workers," "bosses" and "heelers" last fall, and what is more important, the democrats in this state will need them all next fall. The mugwumps should be easy with them.

Lundborg's Perfume, Edenia.

When he reappointed Pearson the president paid up the mugwumps in a lump, so to speak. He is not going to be bothered with any small bills.—Buffalo Commercial.

RAILROAD LANDS.

A Statement Concerning the Recent Order from the General Land Office

Washington Special, April 13, to New York World.

General Sparks will issue another important order in the land office tomorrow, making another strike at the corporations which have for so many years controlled the land office. The Northern Pacific railroad has had a number of friends in the land office and through these friends it has had unusual privileges granted to it under the land grant given to this road by congress. The original grant directed that alternate sections to the width of twenty miles in the states and forty miles in the territories on each side of its line should be given to this road. When the officers of the road came to have it surveyed they ran through a number of lines. In some cases they made two, in others three. They did not decide at once which one would be left as the permanent line. Their friends in the land office permitted them to reserve from entry and public settlement lands lying along the surveyed lines. In some cases public lands 120 miles wide along the line of this road were kept out of the market. In some few cases there were already settlers upon the public lands before congress gave the grant to this railroad. This was particularly true in the states. The road sometimes found itself unable to take up an entire section in places where the law intended them to go because other settlers had been in advance of them. To meet this the friends of the railroad in the land office issued an order giving them the power of indemnifying themselves for such loss. This order permitted the railroad officials to go outside of the grant and locate where they pleased a corresponding number of acres to those already taken up. Under this power the railroad company has picked out the cream of all the lands lying along the numerous lines which they have located. The road has never confined itself to the grant along its finally fixed line. To what an extent the government has been defrauded in this way cannot be told without a special investigation.

An incident which occurred in the land office yesterday illustrates something of the methods of the officials of the road and how they have been hitherto favored by the land office during the short time that the land office was in the hands of the assistant commissioner Harrison. The agents of the railroads appear to have enjoyed wonderful success. A week or ten days ago General Sparks discovered an order of Harrison's exempting [illegible],000 acres from Mr Lamar's order throwing open the forfeited Texas Pacific grant to public entry. That matter he was able to reach in time to prevent any harm being done. Yesterday he found another order which startled him on account of the length of time which had elapsed since it had been issued. This order in effect presented to the Northern Pacific railroad over 600,000 acres of the richest lands in Washington territory. He telegraphed yesterday to all the land offices in Washington territory revoking this order. He did this for the purpose of catching hold of the swindle if possible, but he fears that the land may have been sold before his order reached these offices. Once the land is sold and in the hands of innocent parties it is very difficult to right such a stupendous fraud as was perpetrated in this order four days before Mr Sparks obtained control of the office.

The way the matter was brought about was this: The Northern Pacific railroad has surveyed three lines in Washington territory and has kept the lands bordering on these surveys as usual out of the public market as long as possible. Five years ago it definitely located its line after having picked out the best land along its three lines. The location of its final line was determined according to the usage of the land office during the last twenty years. The line runs through the rich valley which is tributary to the flourishing city of Walla Walla. The railroad company has had no difficulty in selling the land in this valley, as it is very desirable. Since its definite location the country has been settling very rapidly. The railroad with its indefinite lines has claimed nearly the entire country. It has sold a number of lands outside of the limits of its definite location in this valley. In the settlement of this country these lands have become so valuable that the railroad company has been anxious to change its location again so as to take in another wide section. If it is successful it has at least 600,000 acres more. In the absence of any responsible head in the land office it found the subordinates there very willing to further its schemes. The acting land commissioner addressed a very bland misleading letter to Secretary Lamar, and told him that a serious question had arisen in Washington territory as to the exact boundaries of the grant of the Northern Pacific. He said that the innocent settlers had purchased of the railroad company and were now informed that the company had no authority to transfer titles. In the names of these poor innocent settlers Mr Harrison asked for authority to correct the lines. Mr Lamar treated the subject as a matter belonging to the land office and directed the acting commissioner to take such action as was proper and in accordance with the rules of the office. He supposed from the case as stated that it was a mere mathematical question. Under this general direction Mr Harrison had the audacity to issue an order transferring the location of the line after it had been definitely located for five years south so as to take in 600,000 acres of new land. When Mr Sparks discovered this he went at once to Secretary Lamar. The secretary was very indignant. He directed the commissioner to revoke the order at once and take as swift steps as possible to catch up with the mischief already done. The former order will be issued to-morrow. What the commissioner fears is that the ring of officials has gone ahead and with the connivance of the land officials in the territory obtained possession of these lands so as to sell them to some of its friends, who can pose in court as innocent purchasers. It is too much to expect that these men have remained idle during the last two or three weeks since the remarkable order was issued.

General Sparks intends to lay the facts before the president. He says it is almost a hopeless task to try to reform the management of the land office without making wholesale changes. He believes that most of the registers in the land offices in the west are in the pay of the corporations. He has no time to hunt up all the charges that could be brought up against these men in order to secure removals. He is certain that his own immediate office needs thorough overhauling. In view of all the facts thus far developed in the investigation of this office it is not unreasonable to expect that the president will give Mr. Sparks a certain amount of arbitrary power, subject to Mr Lamar's approval, in making sweeping changes. The civil service law, as it now stands, [illegible] to some of the worst thieves in the government service. The land office itself is so full of spies that every movement of the commissioner is known to the agents of the land sharks outside the office almost as soon as anything is done.

BLACK'S BAD BREAK.

Reasons for his Attempt to Remove Miss Sweet—"Reform" in Solid Chunks.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Times, the leading administration paper, is responsible for an interesting story about Commissioner Black's reason for demanding the resignation of Miss Sweet, to the following effect:

Before the Illinois state convention met in July last General Black's name was frequently mentioned as a candidate for governor. When the convention met it was found that Carter Harrison had a large majority of the delegates. General Black, among his personal friends, had been bitterly opposed to Harrison, but he concluded to step aside and endeavor to secure an election as delegate-at-large to the national convention. He was a strong McDonald man, while the state was strong for Cleveland. To get to the national convention he needed the assistance of the Harrison people, and it has been asserted that in order to succeed he was induced to promise that if chosen he would make a speech nominating Carter Harrison for president. The proof has not been made that this dicker was effected, but General Black went to the convention as delegate-at-large, and, forgetting that he had denounced Harrison, presented him in an eulogistic speech as the candidate of Illinois. The gentleman who tells this story says that Black and Harrison have since been working together. Both gentlemen have been aspiring to the United States senatorship. A short time ago, when Harrison's chances disappeared, it was reported at Springfield that the Cook county delegation in the legislature would support Black for United States senator if Miss Sweet was removed and Mrs. Mulligan put in her place. The city election was coming on in Chicago and Harrison needed all the support he could get to make him mayor. He was very anxious to get a strong Irish vote. Word was sent to Washington by Carter Harrison intimating that if the removal of Miss Sweet could be made before the election it would be reciprocated when a break occurred in the legislature by a transfer of the Cook county vote from Morrison to Black. The demand for Miss Sweet's resignation accompanied by a compliment for her faithful services was sent by telegraph. It was not to take effect for three months, so that the necessity for asking the resignation by wire appears to have been justified by some extraordinary exigency. The mails would have taken it forty-four hours, but that would have brought it to Chicago about Monday instead of Saturday before the election, too late to produce the desired effect upon the sentimental Irish voters. The question is asked by the Illinois gentleman who tells this story whether General Black has not tried to break down Morrison's column in the legislature, and whether he has not only used the pension office to advance his cause, but at the same time has sought to disorganize Morrison's friends in the legislature. It is even asserted that he has discredited Chairman Oberly's standing with the administration while Mr. Oberly has been a welcome and frequent visitor to the White house. The ingratitude of this is apparent if the assertion is true when it is known that Pension Commissioner Black owes his appointment to his present place principally to Mr Oberly. The attempted removal of Miss Sweet now that the election is over appears to have been abandoned.

ENGLAND AND RUSSIA

In the excellent article on "England and Russia," by J Fred. Clarke, Esq., of this city, published in the last SUNDAY OREGONIAN, it was remarked that the policy of Russia was to enlarge her vast empire by military aggression and to hold it by despotic rule; while the policy of England, though not free from military aggression at various periods, has been to extend to all peoples subject to her rule the benefits of freedom, and of just and enlightened government. "Wherever Russia has made her conquests," he says, "she has maintained her power by force of arms, and has exhibited small concern for the welfare of her conquered subjects. The policy of England has been to aid her territorial acquisitions to become self-sustaining, her sole benefit being in her commercial interchanges; and thus England and many of her colonies have become rich, whilst Russia, as has been the case with all military despotisms, has degraded all the nations she has conquered." Again "Russia has never been placed in England's position She has never had a great distant colony or dependency. Her extension of territory has mainly been by conquest of countries adjoining her own and which she holds in subjection by the aid of a perfect network of military posts. English and Russian rule are so thoroughly antithetical that it may be said that the result of one is attraction and the other repulsion."

This is very justly said. There can be no question as to whether the good of mankind would be promoted the more by the extension of Russian or of British power. Sir Lepel Griffin did not much overstate the case when he said that Russian conquest "was no more gain to civilization than was the irruption of the Huns and Vandals, who for centuries crushed the civilization of Europe."

While it is not to be denied that British power is aggressive, it is only just to remember that its advance is tempered always by the humanities of an enlightened civilization. England has pushed her trade everywhere, and that has led her to "meddle" everywhere, and the footing she has gained through commercial intercourse she has, when the interests of her commerce have been threatened, maintained by force of arms. This has led everywhere to territorial acquisition, it has built up her colonial powers, but the enlargement of her sway has in all cases conferred immense benefits on the peoples who have been subjected to it. English industry, English enlightment, English justice, have been extended wherever English power has gone. All this has, on many occasions, been attended by measures stern and rigorous, but they have been measures of repression rather than of despotism. England has extended her rule over no people on the globe whom she has not bettered and to whom she has not secured a greater measure of liberty and prosperity than they before enjoyed.

In America there is not that cordiality toward England that existed before our civil war. While we were in sore straits England took advantage of our difficulties to treat us with an unkindness and injustice which we shall not soon forget. Her ruling classes were anxious for a permanent division of the Great Republic,—a result which would have given her a chance to play off one American power against another, and to secure great advantages through free trade with the confederacy of the south Mindful of this, Americans would not be sorry to see England get into a war with a power great enough to give her a check, though no one believes that the advance of Russia, as against England, would, in the long run, further the interests of civilization and of freedom

THE SURPLUS WHITTLED DOWN

On revising his figures, the secretary of the treasury has whittled down the surplus to [illegible] millions. Under the old method it would have been shown to be 153 millions. The changes in the classification of items, by which the available assets are so reduced, has been already explained. Some of the changes are mainly a matter of taste. The matter most criticised is the assumption that 100 millions of gold must be held absolutely in reserve as a redemption fund, and must not be held liable to meet the demands upon the treasury outside this specific purpose There is no doubt, however, that the secretary has authority under the law thus to hold this amount in gold, and the friends of a sound and stable currency do not question the wisdom of the policy As has been said, the real value of a reserve is a moral value Its existence certifies visibly to the power of the government at any time to redeem its promises to pay, and that certificate is worth to the business interests of this country many times the paltry interest charge, even upon a sum so large as $100,000,000.

The silver advocates are naturally loud in their denunciations of the course taken by the secretary, as they hold that it is an unfair and invidious distinction against the silver dollar The new showing also displeases the extreme free traders, because the appearance of a comparatively small treasury surplus will be used by the high-tariff partisans as an argument to show that it will not do to reduce the revenues. It is most displeasing, however, to statesmen like ex-Congressman Belford of Colorado, who is complaining that the government has passed into the hands of New York and Pennsylvania. It was the delight of this bumptious Colorado member in the house to vocifer[illegible] of the trea[illegible]. This is not the only par[illegible] in which he, and others of his class, made an error in counting the chickens before they were hatched

Governor McEnery of Louisiana, has set apart the last day of April as Louisiana day at the exposition, and he has sent out invitations to the governors of all the states and territories that have been organized out of the original territory of Louisiana, to take part in making this the greatest day in the history of the fair If Virginia—or Ohio—is the "Mother of Statesmen," Louisiana is certainly the great mother of states. Out of her original bounds have been carved eleven states and five territories—some of the latter still big enough to split into two or three states—containing now a population of 16,000,000 If all these send delegations, from Arkansas to Dakota, Idaho, Oregon and Washington, it will be a great day

There is much complaint among the merchants and manufacturers of Birmingham over the loss to English trade which they allege has resulted from the want of energy displayed by the British government in protecting British interests affected by the French dispute with China. It is asserted that the government's failure to resist the French declaration against lead as a contraband of war and its toleration of the French arrest of the British merchant ship Glenroy in Chinese waters and seizure of its cargo of lead have resulted in the transfer of an enormous ammunition business for China from England to the United States and Germany

War against such a power as Russia is something Kinglake declares that the Crimean War brought to the grave a million of workmen and soldiers, while a French statistician has computed that the money cost to all the nations involved was over $1,700,000,000 That time England, France, Turkey and Sardinia were against Russia yet the might of Muscovy held them all at bay, so that after a war of two years they had taken only one fortress. Russia then consented to peace only because Austria was about to come into the alliance against her

"Give us the offices, and we'll carry the state and elect a democratic senator," say the democratic politicians of Oregon to the president. Republican officials who help their party are "offensive partisans," democratic officials who propose to do the same, will not be But perhaps the senate may not see it in that light. Then what?

It must be confessed that the movements of the English government in the matters in dispute with Russia are slow. Under a Palmerston or D'Israeli administration war would have been declared ere now. The provocation for war has been fully given, and the Russians not only hold the disputed territory in Afghanistan but appear to have the more courageous diplomacy. England is compromised if not humiliated, by every hour of delay which she permits. The indecision and even the timidity of the British ministry are remarked by the whole world and by none so impatiently as the English themselves.

LEE'S SWORD

General Jubal Early has published an ungracious letter to say that General Lee's sword was not offered to General Grant, for the reason that the terms of capitulation provided that officers should retain their side arms, and quotes authorities, with an evident wish to show that Lee owed nothing to General Grant's magnanimity General Badeau who was on Grant's staff and whose history of the transaction is undoubtedly correct, describes the interview, Grant and Lee first met on the threshold of the McLean farmhouse, now Appomattox village, and, passing into it, arranged the terms of surrender in its little parlor While Grant was putting the terms of surrender—which he had accepted verbally—into writing, he noticed Lee's handsome sword, the gift of the state of Virginia, by the side of the confederate commander "The sight,' says Badeau, "suggested an alteration in the terms, and he inserted the provision that officers should be allowed to retain their side arms, horses and personal property Lee had accepted Grant's conditions without this stipulation and doubtless expected to surrender his sword But this humiliation he and his gallant officers were spared."

General Badeau's account of the transaction is confirmed by a letter written by General Grant March 23, 1877, to the Bangor Whig, in reply to a request from its editor that he should settle the history of the Appomattox interview. He says

> Nothing was said about swords side arms baggage or private horses, until I wrote the terms of surrender in which I gave them at which General Lee was much affected and said those terms would have a good effect upon his army
>
> He had on apparently an entirely new uniform and a magnificent sword such as is not usually worn in the field—and it certainly left the impression that the expectation was to surrender it.
> Nothing was said in the preliminary conversation to warrant the assumption that anything more was to be granted to the rebel army than that they were to be permitted to return to their homes on laying down their arms and not to be molested in their persons so long as they remained there and obeyed the laws in force thereat

General Early is therefore right in saying that Lee's sword was not offered to his conqueror, but he is very far from right in intimating that General Lee owed nothing to General Grant's magnanimity Lee's sword was not tendered, only because General Grant had in effect already declined it. General Lee said the terms were magnanimous and they were made still more so in practice, for General Grant instructed his officers to allow the rebel cavalry and artillery men to keep their horses, as well as the confederate officers, because, as he said, they would need them to till their farms.

In order to enable our country to take a fair advantage of the opportunity for profit, in case of war between England and Russia, the New York Herald holds that the president (should the war actually begin), ought to convene congress in special session, that legislation suitable to new conditions might be enacted. Of course we should not depart from the rule of the most impartial neutrality we would merely enact such laws, strictly within the pale of our obligations as a neutral nation, as would best promote the commercial and industrial interests of our own country The suggestion is not a bad one

After William L Marcy of New York enunciated the famous spoils doctrine he said, in explanation of it, that what he meant was that it was the right of an administration to select for the enforcement of its policy such officers as were in sympathy with it and had its confidence "As thus understood," asks the New York Sun, "does anybody dispute the soundness of the doctrine of Governor Marcy?" Not at all. As thus explained it was the doctrine of the republican party in 1876 The trouble was that Marcy's party understood and applied the doctrine literally.

Minnesota democrats have appointed Hons P H Kelly and Michael Doran to take charge of federal appointments in that state. They are resolved that Ignatius Donnelly is not deserving of any office whatever, This leaves Mr Donnelly free to pursue his Shakespearean studies. "Literary fellers" like him must solace themselves with the reflection that "learning is its own reward"

The prosecuting counsel, Mr Root, said the attempt of James D Fish to inculpate General Grant in fraud and corruption as he stands on the brink of the grave, "stamps the whole transaction." It does indeed It shows that Fish is essentially mean, as well as a rascal. He is destitute of the honor that sometimes characterizes lesser thieves.

From January 1 to April 1 of the present year the Northern Pacific earned $1,802,973, same months last year, $2,113,144 Decrease this year, $303,171 Milwaukee and St. Paul, three months, $4,946,000, gain over same months last year, $373,113. Northwestern, three months, $4,776,900, gain over same months last year, $344.

Senator Sherman, who was tendered an informal reception by the Ohio legislature a few days ago, made a speech on financial and other topics, in the course of which he said the country would have to go through the same struggle to make a silver dollar of equal value to a gold dollar that it did to resume specie payment

A cabinet officer is quoted as authority for the statement that the president offered important offices to George William Curtis, Carl Schurz, George Jones of the New York Times, and James Gordon Bennett, and they all declined

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

THE GRISWOLD CASE REDIVIVUS.—There is a refreshing vitality and longevity about the case of the United States vs W C Griswold which endears it to newspaper reporters, who have found in it for years a prolific source of items from which they could cut and come again and have no fears of the supply failing. And now a new and what bids fair to be a rather interesting feature in the case has arisen. It will be remembered that the United States government, through B. F Dowell, informer, sued Griswold to recover some $35,000 obtained from the government by fraudulent warrants. After years of litigation, about $32,000 was recovered. The great expense connected with securing this sum and interest on the claim, amounted to so much that there is still a balance due the government of $31,000. Some time since Griswold begged for mercy, stating that he had been stripped of all his property, that he was growing old and, in short had been "all broke up" by this suit, and he wished to compromise with the government, offering to pay something like a third of a cent on the dollar, stating that this was the best he could do. The government seemed inclined to believe Griswold's statement and accept his proposition. But Mr Dowell who, as informer, has a half interest in the suit and the proceeds, did not come down. So after some correspondence with the U S district attorney the compromise was suspended. The new administration, however, seems to have taken a new view of the case, as District Attorney Watson has been notified by the solicitor of the treasury that "the letter suspending the compromise with W C Griswold, pending certain inquiries has been revoked, and the former letter of acceptance revived." It is ordered that Mr Dowell be notified of this, and if after due time for consideration is allowed, no objection is made, District Attorney Watson will satisfy the judgment against Griswold, and the latter will be relieved from a nightmare which has roosted on him for many years. But alas for the realization of his hopes! Mr Dowell claims that he is an equal partner with the government in the business, and claims that the government cannot satisfy his part of the execution, and he will object to the arrangement in the forcible and persistent style which is his chief characteristic. So we have not heard the last of this business yet, for if the government insists on satisfying the judgment, Mr Dowell will then try conclusions with the great American nation itself, and it is hard to tell which will hold out longest or come out on top.

WHAT A BOY'S TEARS ACCOMPLISHED.—Chief of Police Parrish has detailed two officers to watch the west side train at Fourth street and arrest any persons who are guilty of jumping on or off while the cars are in motion. Saturday Policeman Young arrested a darkey named Glasco, who was released upon his own recognizance, and a boy about eight years old. The lad cried so hard and promised so faithfully that he would never do it again, that Captain Hair released him after fifteen minutes imprisonment. A gentleman who happened to be in the office remarked to Officer Beach, "I couldn't find it in my heart to lock up a boy who showed such penitence." "Perhaps if you had more experience you would change your mind," replied Beach. "Last week I ran across a gang of hoodlums between 8 and 12 years old on my beat after 10 o'clock at night, and I ordered them to go home. All but one started off. This little devil was stubborn and refused to go, so I took him by the arm and started toward the jail with him. We hadn't got a block until he broke down and cried as if his heart would break, and I couldn't stop his tears. On promise of good behavior, I let him go. Half an hour after I stole up quietly to the rendezvous and here was the same crowd. Imagine my surprise when I heard the little hoodlum I had arrested telling his comrades 'Betcher life, the blankety blank blank was afraid to arrest me, coz my father would lick h—l out of him.' You see you can't always be certain when and where to extend sympathy."

REPUBLICAN NOMINEES.—Pursuant to a call, eleven republicans assembled at the vacant building on the south east corner of Fifth and L streets, East Portland, Saturday evening, to nominate candidates for councilmen for the newly established third ward, to be voted for at a special election to be held on Monday next—the term of one to expire ten days after the general election in June, 1885; the other, ten days after the general election in 1886. Dr S E Josephi was elected chairman of the meeting, and Mr A B Bloomer secretary. For the short term Mr A B Bloomer was placed in nomination, and there being no other nominations he was elected by acclamation. For the long term Messrs C D McClure and P O Lundin were nominated. McClure receiving eight votes against three for Lundin, he was declared duly nominated. The nomination was made unanimous and the meeting adjourned. The polls for the election will be held at the same place from 8 A M to 6 P M, Monday. The Third ward embraces that portion of the city lying between K and U streets.

LOST THE HORSE, BUT GOT THE MAN.—Henry Wilmer, deputy poundkeeper, furnishes a different version of the story published yesterday about his taking up a horse found in Colonel W W Chapman's clover. He says that as he was leading off the horse Pat Frainey came up and cut the rope. Henry said "If I have lost the horse I have got you," when Frainey exhibiting a knife, remarked that no one could take him. Whereupon Wilmer drew a pistol, and Frainey weakened and was led off as meek as a lamb. His uncle agreed to settle the poundage for the horse, and did so, and nobody having been hurt and Wilmer bearing no malice, allowed the matter to drop. Wilmer says the thermometer will be way down below zero when any man takes a horse away from him with impunity.

LOOKING FOR HER HUSBAND.—A very genteel woman named Peterson, a Scandinavian, came up from San Francisco by the last steamer in search of her husband, whom she fears has become insane. He came to Portland about a fortnight ago, and bought a small farm on the east side. He telegraphed her, asking her to come to Portland, then followed the first dispatch with a message to wait a week, and then sent a third, the meaning of which she could not gather. Mrs Peterson was very much afraid that the man adjudged insane by the county court last Friday, whose name was unknown, but who was sent under the name of Frank Fritch, was her husband. Investigation showed that this was not the case.

IN FAVOR OF THE CITY.—The case of Samuel Heiple against the city of East Portland has been decided in favor of the defendant. Heiple wished to enjoin the city from collecting from him $600 for street improvement on Fourth street in East Portland, where it has been extended along the line of the old county road north of A street, claiming that the city had no right to take and improve a county road as it would a city street. The city showed that a plat had been filed in the office of the county clerk, wherein the city limits had been extended and the road condemned as a street and thereby came under their control. Judge Stearns accordingly decided against Heiple and refused to grant the injunction desired.

FIREMEN'S TOURNAMENT.—Preparations for the coming State Firemen's tournament at Astoria are being made upon an extensive scale, and Astoria will doubtless be thronged with visitors to witness the contests. The Salem firemen will bring a crowd of their admirers and if possible will charter a special steamboat and go all the way by water, with a brass band and any quantity of flags fluttering to the breeze. There are expected to take part in the contests four companies from Salem, three from Albany, one from Lebanon, one from Eugene, one from The Dalles and two from Oregon City, with several other places yet to hear from.

IN HIT LUCK.—The star baseball club have had bad luck with their proposed excursion to Vancouver. Two weeks ago they advertised it for Sunday, the 12th, and the weather was fine until the Saturday night preceding when a heavy rain fell and kept them from going. Last week the weather was cold and rainy and on Saturday they announced a further postponement. But the weather cleared yesterday forenoon and the day was fine. However as the postponement had been announced, they decided to abide by it. They will go next Sunday if the day is clear.

WON THEIR SECOND GAME.—The Dollet baseball club went over to Vancouver yesterday in an omnibus which they specially chartered. They wore their new uniforms, and played a friendly match with a picked nine from the soldiers at the garrison, some of whom were members of the American Stars. The Dollets were victorious by a score of [illegible] to 16, and came home rejoicing. They think the handsome uniforms paralyzed the Vancouverites so they could not play their best.

Y. M. C. A. LECTURE.—One of the most interesting entertainments of the members' course of lectures will be given at the Y. M. C. A. hall this evening by Prof R. K. Warren of the High school, on chemism. The theory of modern explosives will be given and illustrated by experiment, which will be very brilliant.

COUNTY FINANCES.—County Treasurer Showers has paid and cancelled warrants to the amount of $105,816 64, up to Saturday night. On that day he paid over to the state on taxes due from Multnomah county the sum of $75,000 and will to-day pay about $50,000 into the school fund.

THROWN FROM A HORSE AND KILLED.—DeWayne Bailey of Lost Valley, Wasco county, started out on horseback one day last week to hunt up a lost cow, and met with a fatal accident. He was found a few hours afterward about a mile from his home lying on the ground insensible, having evidently been thrown from his horse. He died the same day, never regaining consciousness. The parents of the deceased reside in Yamhill county. He was 21 years of age, and married but two months ago.

COLORADO PRESS EXCURSION.—The annual excursion of the Colorado State Press Association will be over the Short Line from Denver to Portland, with stops at Hailey and Boise City, Idaho, and probably a ride to Astoria. It will occupy about two weeks and will leave shortly after the annual meeting which takes place at Denver July 14. The secretary, Mr W E Pabor of Fruita, Mesa county, has made all necessary arrangements with the Union Pacific and the O R & N companies for transportation.

IS THIS A THREAT?—It is believed the Victorian would be only too glad to see the Russians come over here and capture British Columbia, and, perhaps, even take a hand in the muss itself, as witness the following from its columns: "The Victoria Colonist says its one war ship can whip any three Russian men-of-war afloat. That's all right! You just keep on thinking so. Some of these days we'll mount a swivel gun on the Shubrick and a pair of carronades on the General Wright, and then beware!"

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.—Judge Deady will announce a decision in this court this morning in the case of the Oregonian Ry. Co., Limited, v. The O R & N Co., on the application for an injunction to require the defendant to furnish the receiver money to put the plaintiff's road in repair, and also in the case of Goldsmith v. Gilliland et. al., on the exceptions to the bill for impertinence.

SUING FOR STOLEN TREASURE

A Claim Nearly Twenty Years Old of $12,000 against W. L. Adams, ex-Collector of Customs at Astoria

About twenty years ago William L. Adams now of Hood River was collector of customs at Astoria and a large sum of money having accumulated in his hands he was ordered by the secretary of the treasury to take it to San Francisco and place it in the United States depository there. He placed about $8,000 in coin in his trunk and the remainder of the money which was in greenbacks in his pockets, and took passage on the steamer for San Francisco to carry out the order he had received. On the trip down while he was at his dinner one of the stewards cut a hole in the bottom of the trunk and carried off the coin in a slop bucket. He was some time afterward arrested in New York and a portion, some $8000 or so, of the money recovered and the thief convicted and punished. Mr Adams according to general opinion was not to blame in the matter. He had been ordered to personally take the money to San Francisco. It would have been illegal to send the money by express or to have put it into bills of exchange if it had been possible, or to have placed any one else in charge of the money. An effort was made to have congress pass a bill for the relief of Mr Adams to free him from all obligations to the government in the matter and the effort has been renewed at various times during the past eighteen years. The bill sometimes passed one house and sometimes passed the other, but never succeeded in passing both houses at the same session. The matter was almost forgotten even by those most interested.

And now comes orders to U. S. District Attorney Watson to commence and press a suit against Mr Adams for the recovery of the sum lost which is about $12,000. Under these instructions Mr Watson will to-day begin suit in the United States circuit court against Mr Adams and his bondsmen to recover the money. The bondsmen are P. W. Gillette of this city, C. [illegible] Parker of Astoria, George Summers and Cyrus Olney. The latter is dead. The suit is probably brought to make a final disposition of the matter but there is very slight chance of the government receiving any benefit by it as even if the parties were able to pay, it is doubtful if any jury in the land would bring in a verdict for the government.

The ex-collector is the father of Judge W. H. Adams of this city.

THE HUSBAND'S STORY.

What Mr. Welch has to Say about the Domestic Infelicity existing between himself and Clorinda, his Wife.

The case of Clorinda Welch vs. John R. Welch, a suit for divorce has been referred to N. D. Simon to take testimony and report his findings to the court. The defendant has been declared to be in default for having made no answer to his wife's complaint. From a letter received at this office it is learned that he does not intend to oppose any objections to his wife getting a divorce, but thinks the sooner they are rid of each other the better for both. His letter gives a little different story of domestic infelicity from that published in these columns as drawn from the wife's complaint, but quite as unique and interesting in its way.

Mr Welch gives the statements of Mr Samuel Fedigo and Mr and Mrs. William Hickey, who boarded with him declaring they were always comfortable and provided for better than his circumstances should allow him to. In another place in the letter he says: "I would ask of her and her parents why did they advise me to buy this shanty as they call it, if it was not suitable for her."

As regards his not speaking to her for whole weeks, he declares the state of things to have been just the reverse and relates the following incident:

"While visiting neighbor Reams one day we played a game of cards. Finally she got mad and putting on her things said if we could do no better than play cards we should go home; this hurting Mrs Ream's feelings very badly. On returning home she would not talk when I would speak, and during that week dear reader I did cook my own meals."

Another incident is told thusly: "One time when she was home on a visit Mr Elias Rowark came, asking her to take a buggy ride with him. She consented, and was gone for several hours laying herself liable to be killed by a kicking horse, also leaving a little babe only four months old at home to be cared for by others. Does this show any love for a man at home hard at work, and a wife riding with other men and a little babe alone without a mother's care?"

In the closing paragraph of his letter Mr. Welch endeavors to point a moral as follows: "I once did love this woman as dearly as I love my mother, but I married her against her parents will, and since that time they have caused trouble between us."

NOTES FROM MORROW COUNTY

[illegible] Morrow Co. April [illegible] 1885

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

Noticing an article on second page of your issue of 16th inst. entitled "Middle Oregon" I conclude the following may be of interest to many of your readers as showing what profit there is in proper cultivation of the soil in this section.

On Mr Frank Or[illegible]'s ranch at [illegible] post office is a field of wheat containing about 120 acres. Fifty acres were broken last April and May, sown in September and now show wheat from four to five inches in height and which with a little rain should yield twenty five to twenty eight bushels to the acre. About fifty acres more cultivated the second time, show wheat seven to eight inches in height and should yield at least thirty five bushels. The first plowing of this land was poor, and aided very little in assisting decomposition of the heavy bunch grass and weeds. Another patch of twenty acres was plowed for the second time last spring, planted to corn, well cultivated, harrowed in the fall [illegible] [illegible] The grain now stands from [illegible] [illegible] inches high and will go over forty [illegible] to the acre if it gets a shower or two of rain [illegible] May.

[illegible] [illegible] of this kind [illegible] [illegible] height about [illegible] [illegible] striking [illegible] February [illegible] until yesterday when a light rain of two or three hours did an inestimable amount of good.

FOUR MILE

VERDICT OF ACQUITTAL

THE DALLES April 18—The trial of Joseph H. Walker for the killing of Thomas Gordon last Oct. [illegible] was concluded in the circuit court this morning. A few minutes before 9 o'clock word was sent to the judge and the attorneys that the jury had agreed and at the opening of the court at [illegible] o'clock the jury came in and returned a verdict of not guilty. The case has excited much interest in this county as both parties were well known and both had many friends and an unusual array of legal talent was employed on both sides. During the entire trial the court room was filled, a large portion of the audience being ladies. Friday afternoon and evening were occupied with the arguments and charge. District Attorney M. B. Hill and Hon. E. Whillings addressing the jury for the state and Judge Walker and Hon. W. [illegible] Hill for the defendant. When the verdict was read by the clerk the scene between the defendant, his aged father and mother and his wife was affecting in the extreme. The defendant was immediately discharged. James Walker brother of the [illegible] who was indicted by the grand jury for assault with a dangerous weapon was arrested as soon as Joe was discharged but is [illegible] [illegible] was the same as in the case against [illegible] the case was dismissed. Public opinion is [illegible] the justice of the verdict and the [illegible] is much discussed.

THE STAGE

THE [illegible] After considerable [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] expense the renowned Berlin Lady orchestra will make their first appearance this evening at this [illegible] for a time [illegible] together with the [illegible] minstrels, [illegible] the great [illegible] juggler and several other first class artists. The lady orchestra [illegible] very highly spoken of by musical critics [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] impression.

ITEMS OF ART

A Few Things that Mr J W Whalley Picked up on his Tour Through Europe

D[illegible] J W Wh[illegible] E[illegible] he purcha[illegible] of works of art statuary paint[illegible] [illegible] his home here. A few of these [illegible] home with him were [illegible] at the Mechanics' Fair and [illegible]

[illegible] a representative of this paper who has a [illegible] for the beautiful asked Mr Whalley for a sight of his treasures. The favor was readily granted and the further favor of Mr Whalley's company as cicerone for an hour or more was kindly added. Among the paintings are several fine copies of celebrated works of the old masters. [illegible] Aurora representing Apollo setting forth for his regular daily trip [illegible] by the hours represented by [illegible] figures has formed the subject of so many engravings that it is familiar to nearly every one. St Michael and Satan [illegible] is a striking and beautiful painting representing the saint [illegible] [illegible] devil [illegible] chained [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the light [illegible] [illegible] the picture of the devil is [illegible] [illegible] There is a very fine copy of the Madonna [illegible] [illegible] the infant in her arms appearing as if [illegible] relief [illegible]

But the painting which connoisseurs would admire perhaps most of all in the collection is the Magdalen after Schiavoni. The effects produced by two different lights falling upon the figure attract the attention of all. In its light and shade it is absolutely wonderful. The Magdalen is seated between the red light of the [illegible] and the glorious illumination of heaven holding in her knees a cross. From the depths of the [illegible] ruddy flame the [illegible] [illegible] glow on her naked body which is met from above [illegible] by soft sunlight and the blending of colors where they meet could not be more delicate.

Among the most interesting of the paintings are copies of two which decorated the walls of a house in Pompeii one representing a female gathering flowers the other cupids riding a race on [illegible] There is also a bronze statuette from the House of the Fauns in Pompeii representing a faun pouring wine from a pigskin into a vessel with the evident intention, judging from the expression of his features of placing it inside of his own skin.

Busts of our Savior and the Mater Dolorosa in marble ornament the library and are of surpassing beauty. A pointer and setter in Sycnite marble, is a most beautiful little gem and recalls the memory of many happy hours with dog and gun to the owner.

But of all the beautiful things Mr Whalley secured two groups in Carrara marble as pure as virgin snow are the most beautiful. One represents two cupids, one of them trying to tramp upon a heart while the other endeavors to restrain him. The other group represents Cupid embracing Psyche and both are masterpieces and must be seen to be appreciated.

There is a facsimile of the inscription on Shakespeare's tomb and others of monumental brasses of some of the Whalleys in the days of the Tudors in chain armor and [illegible] head gear taken by some novel process which will interest one of antiquarian tastes.

A huge album of photographs of objects of interest in Great Britain, France, Spain, Italy and other places visited by Mr Whalley and his daughter forms a miniature panorama of their tour, and with the gentleman himself as a lecturer forms a very good substitute for the trip at much less expense. It is to be hoped that at our next fair the public may be allowed a chance to see some of the works of art above mentioned.

FREIGHTS. San Francisco has closed off [illegible] under the general pressure. Our own market is inactive, with no demand for tonnage and little prospect for early business.

WHEAT—Buyers are doing nothing, abroad and this [illegible] a certain weakness to the market, but [illegible] firm. In their [illegible] Chicago opened at rather better prices, and San Francisco is steadier. Our own market [illegible] to interest buyers and sellers alike, showing no disposition to do business. Valley may be [illegible] at $1 [illegible]@1 50, and Walla Walla at $1 [illegible]@1 2[illegible], but sellers generally ask more. Receipts of valley are light and the Walla Walla coming in [illegible] on old purchases account or for shipment to San Francisco.

FLOUR—Standards firm at $4 2[illegible], with liberal business done.

OATS—Last sales of best feed were at 36c, but this is only paid under pressure, and to sell [illegible] likely less will probably have to be accepted. The demand is fair and has taken all offerings. Common to poor qualities sell slowly.

POTATOES—Offerings appear to have fallen off slightly because of lower values. The outlook for any improvement is poor, as the seeding request from California is lessening and new will soon be plentiful, being now quoted at 1@[illegible]c in San Francisco.

ONIONS—Choice very firm at [illegible]c for both local uses and shipment. Soft kinds slow.

PROVISIONS—Market very steady at unchanged values, local cured being mostly dealt in.

DRIED FRUIT—Dull and weak for apples and pears, others steady to firm.

POULTRY—Chickens steady at $[illegible]. Other kinds in light request and weak.

EGGS—A better feeling is apparent under lighter stocks, but 12@12½c can only be quoted.

WOOL—Quiet trade done in the interior in eastern Oregon grades at 12@17c, but the movement remains small. New York mail dates report: The condition of the market remains substantially as outlined for several weeks past, and the same unsatisfactory results and discouraging features are present [illegible]. The demand has not improved with the advance of the season, and prices, though showing no quotable change, have continued to favor buyers. Manufacturers, however, are slow to avail themselves of this advantage, and will doubtless continue to pursue the cautious policy adopted early in the season until the outlet for their goods shows signs of improvement. In Boston and Philadelphia the movement has been moderate, but the low prices realized are a source of dissatisfaction to sellers, and it is not surprising to hear numerous expressions of complaint. Fine combing descriptions are about the only goods showing firmness, but fine delaine fleeces, on account of light supplies, are held with a fair degree of steadiness. The demand for pulled wools has been good, but with stocks rather large values have continued to rule low.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Government bonds have been quiet and strong, with a gain of ⅛ per cent bid for [illegible] and 4s.

With the exception of one or two stocks the stock market has been dull to-day, total sales being only 20,[illegible] shares. The Gould stocks were prominent for their strength, while Grangers were weak, the latter on reports that settlement of troubles between roads in the northwest had again been postponed, with little prospect of reaching an adjustment. Late this afternoon there was a sudden break in Omaha, accompanied by further yielding of prices in St. Paul and Northwest and the whole list, the weakness continuing until just before the close, when there was a slight rally in some of the most active stocks. In some cases this evening prices are the lowest for days, but in the more active stocks final quotations show advances of ⅛ to ⅜ from the lowest quotations. With only two or three exceptions they are from ⅛ to 1½ per cent lower than at the close yesterday. Union Pacific persistently advanced throughout the forenoon, remained steady until after [illegible] o'clock, when it yielded and closed at 47, a gain of ½ per cent. Other Gould stocks were quiet but strong until near the close, when they declined small fractions, and closed a shade off from yesterday, except Missouri Pacific, which is still ⅛ higher. Sales of Pacific Mail were limited to 15,000 shares, the price rising in the forenoon, but declining later and closing at a loss of [illegible] per cent. The Vanderbilts were very dull and steady. Comparing prices this evening with those of a week ago, changes vary from a decline of 4 per cent to an advance of [illegible] per cent.

THE KOH-I-NOOR

None of the noted precious stones now in existence can claim a more remarkable antiquity than the Koh-i-noor diamond. Its history can be traced for over five and a half centuries; tradition extends the story to the time of the half-mythic Bikramajeet of India, about B. C. 57, and still wilder legends place its discovery five thousand years ago.

This great diamond first appeared in history in 1304, when it came into the treasury of Delhi from the conquest of Malwa by Ala-ud-deen. From that time forth it seems never to have been lost sight of. Now the property of one victorious sovereign, and then gracing the jewel chambers of another, its fortunes were linked with the fate of empires. Borne by the conquering Persians to Khorassan, it was brought back in triumph by Ahmed Shah, and from his son's failing hands it passed, in turn, to such princes of India as managed, from time to time, to get the better of their rivals. Its [illegible] wanderings ended in 1850. The Indian power having fallen before the arms of England, the diamond once more changed owners, and was presented to the queen.

Hindu superstition assigns a most malevolent influence to their stone. Wrested from its rightful line of possessors hundreds of years ago, its continual changes from one conqueror to another beget and confirm the idea that it brings curses and ruin on each successive owner. Singularly enough its advent into Europe occurred at such a time as to strengthen the Indian belief. "The Brahmin sage," says Mr. King, "who studies the book of fate is probably not dispossessed of his hereditary superstition touching the malign powers of this stone, when he thinks upon the so speedily following Russian war, that completely annihilated the prestige of the British arms—the legacy of Wellington's successes—and upon the events of the Sepoy mutiny, three years later."

The Hindoos, although long acquainted with the art of cutting and polishing the diamond, had quite different notions about its practice from those which afterward prevailed in Europe. A prime object with the Indian lapidary was to lessen the weight of the stone as little as possible, and his operations were directed more to a mere polishing of the natural surface than to reducing it to any given shape. The Koh-i-noor, as it came from India, is a remarkable example of their working. A singularly shaped stone in the rough, it lost so little substance in the hands of the lapidary that it gained few of the beauties for which the diamond is peculiarly dependent on art. When exhibited at the London world's fair, in 1851, it was a curiosity, but lacked the splendid brilliance of a properly cut diamond. To use the words of a critical observer, it was almost as lustreless as a bit of rock crystal. The dissatisfaction with the Koh-i-noor in its Indian cut form was such that the question of recutting it was soon canvassed. It was shown to several of the most prominent scientific men of the day, Sir David Brewster among the number—and their opinions were that the undertaking presented great difficulties. M. Coster, the great diamond cutter of Amsterdam, differed from these gentlemen, however, and declared himself confident that the cutting could be done to perfect satisfaction, and it was finally decided to intrust him with the work. Of various patterns proposed by M. Coster, the "brilliant" or double cone was chosen, a selection scarcely advisable, as the stone was of such shape that the greatest possible amount of waste was entailed by reducing it to this form. The sacrifice of material was almost as excessive as the saving of it had been in the first place, and after all, a perfect brilliant could not be obtained, as the stone was too shallow to admit of being cut to the most approved pattern without reducing it in size beyond all reason.

The operation of recutting was performed in London, in 1852, under the care of the Messrs. Garrard, the queen's jewelers, a small steam engine having been erected on their premises especially for the purpose. It was conducted by Herr Voorsanger, the best hand in Coster's great establishment, who, with a skillful assistant, was sent over for the purpose. The work was executed with the utmost skill and perfection. It is almost unnecessary to add that its brilliancy was vastly increased by the recutting.

The time occupied was only thirty-eight working days. The amount paid for the labor is said to have been £8000, an apparently large sum, but perhaps not extravagant when the skill necessary is considered and the exceeding responsibility of the task taken into account.

The weight of the Koh-i-noor, when shown at the exhibition of 1851, was 186 carats, or something near one and a half ounces avoirdupois. This was reduced, in recutting, to 102¾ carats.

Unfortunately, this much talked of diamond, like some of its most celebrated rivals, is not of the first water. A slight tint of gray detracts somewhat its beauty, and one can scarcely say, without a stretch of imagination, that by recutting it has become a brilliant matchless for purity and fire. Its value, which cannot be got at very well, is estimated at $1,000,000.

GENERAL ANSON STAGER

A War Reminiscence in the Shape of a Huge Practical Joke

William P. Wood, who had charge of the old Capitol prison during the war, publishes over his own signature, in the Washington Gazette, the following incident, which is recalled by the death of General Stager:

"The death of General Anson Stager during the past week brings to mind an episode which occurred at the old Capitol prison in the early part of our fratricidal strife. Mr. Stager had been appointed chief of the United States military telegraph, and was assigned to duty at the war department, with the rank of colonel and aid de camp. He called upon me semi-officially and requested to be shown around among the rebel prisoners then in the old Capitol prison. I asked his purpose. He stated that it was merely curiosity, as he desired to see how live rebels took their imprisonment. I rather bluntly informed him that the prison was not a menagerie whose occupants were on exhibition to inquisitive curiosity seekers. He did not relish my refusal, and said he would obtain Secretary Stanton's order to visit the prisoners. I assured him that an order from the secretary would be obeyed to the letter. I at once took the precaution to forward a note to Mr. Stanton stating that it was injudicious to allow the old Capitol prison to be opened as a menagerie, and that if any of the officials of the department should request the privilege to visit the establishment for that purpose only one admission in my judgment should be granted.

"In two or three days after the application of Stager to see live rebels he again presented himself at the old Capitol prison with a pass from Secretary Stanton to admit the bearer to any room in the prison he should select. I required Colonel Stager to choose a room, and aided him in selecting a large front apartment on the second floor in the northwest corner of the prison, occupied by Georgians and Marylanders, who were a lively set of rollicking fellows. Into this room Mr. Stager was introduced as an official of the war department, who was desirous of seeing how [illegible] rebels conducted themselves as prisoners [illegible] his stay there would [illegible] to entertain him.

"Colonel Stager was ushered into No. [illegible], but soon got tired of the novelty of seeing live rebels and wanted to leave. The guard would not allow him to pass out of the room except as a prisoner under the same restrictions. Colonel Stager sent for me, and after much delay I called on him, desiring to know what he wanted. He asked why he was detained in the prison. I assured him that that was none of my business. I only knew that he would require an order from the same source that brought him in to take him out. He became furious. The 'rebs' took in the situation and made it lively for Colonel Stager. They assured him that his only way out was to secure Secretary Stanton's order for his release. Colonel Stager spent that night in the old Capitol prison, and fared and slept precisely as other prisoners.

"The next day an order came from Secretary Stanton for the release of Colonel Stager. It is unnecessary to state that no official of the war department ever again desired to visit the prison while I had charge of it. General Stager's experience enabled him in after years to entertain his friends with his interesting recollections of one night in the custody of the superintendent of the old Capitol prison."

In Favor of the Practical Fellows

We trust that the southern [illegible] of the president will [illegible] him to appoint any democrats to office who are democrats only in name and for the purpose of securing office. We are for working, [illegible] every time—the practical fellows. Those who perform their party work and submit to party [illegible] plain. Those who go to the precinct and ward meetings, work in the clubs, work at the polls and vote. We do not want the theoretical, but the class elevated over the class we have alluded to above.

The projected bridge across the straits of Messina will span a channel thirty-six feet deep and two and a half miles wide. The viaduct will be supported by two land towers and [illegible] piers, each 2280 feet apart. The hight of the bridge above the water will be 328 feet. Getting All He Asked For Eli Perkins in the Pittsburg Dispatch.

I got tired looking at those warehouses and factories (in Richmond). After looking at 350 of them it became an old story. At last, when I came to one, I would say to the driver:

"Another tobacco factory, Cæsar?"

"Yes, mas'a, dis is a plug fac'try."

"Don't stop," I said, "drive on, let the plug go."

Further on we came to a very large building and a very ancient building.

"Is that a tobacco factory, too?" I asked the driver.

"No, sah, dat's a meetin' house, sah—dat's whar Patrick Henry made his great speech, sah."

"What did Patrick say?" I asked.

"Why he done say, 'give me liberty or gib me deth.'"

"Well, which did they give him?"

"Dey guv him bof, sah—bof."
